CONTENTS

List of Tables xi
Acknowledgments xiii
List of Abbreviations xv

1. Introduction 1
    1.1. Bantu Exceptionalism: What Varies, and Why? 1
    1.2. Familiarity in the Unfamiliar: Insights on Syntax and Variation 4
    1.3. A Note on Zulu 8

2. A-movement and Phi 10
    2.1. Anatomy of a Nominal 11
    2.2. Flexible Word Order 12
    2.3. Subjects and Agreement 14
        2.3.1. Properties of *v*P-external Subjects 16
        2.3.2. Properties of *v*P-internal Subjects 22
        2.3.3. Optionality for Subjects 28
    2.4. Raising Constructions in Zulu 30
        2.4.1. Raising-to-subject 30
        2.4.2. Raising-to-object 41
    2.5. Beyond Subject Distribution: Adding Arguments 44
    2.6. Summary 53

3. Uncovering Argument Licensing 54
    3.1. Nominal Distribution and Case Theory in Bantu 55
        3.1.1. The Profile of Abstract Case 56
        3.1.2. Against Standard Case Theory in Bantu 60
    3.2. Augmentless Nominals 65
        3.2.1. The Distribution of Augmentless Nominals 66
    3.3. Augmentless Nominal Licensing 72
        3.3.1. The *v*P-internal Restriction on Augmentless Nominals 73

3.3.2. Augmentless Nominals within *v*P 78
3.3.3. Summary 89
3.4. Augmentless Nominals and the Case for Case: A Cross-linguistic Comparison 90
3.4.1. Revisiting the Question of Case in Bantu 91
3.4.2. Restricting Augmentless Nominals without Case? 94
3.4.3. Clues from the Broader Bantu Landscape 101
3.5. Augmentless Nominals as Bare Negative NPs? 111
3.5.1. Syntactic Licensing of Negative Indefinites 112
3.6. Summarizing the Case for Case 116

4. Licensing and *v*P 118
4.1. Introduction 118
4.2. The Conjoint/Disjoint Alternation: Basic Distribution 120
4.2.1. The Conjoint/Disjoint Alternation and Argument Position 123
4.2.2. The Conjoint/Disjoint Alternation with Locatives and Adverbs 126
4.2.3. Diagnostics for *v*P Edge 128
4.2.4. Against a Prosodic Account of the Conjoint/Disjoint Alternation 134
4.2.5. The Conjoint/Disjoint Alternation as a Marker of Syntactic Constituency 137
4.3. A Familiar Signature 140
4.3.1. Asymmetric Probe–Goal Relationships 143
4.4. The Nature of L as a Probe 146
4.4.1. The Conjoint/Disjoint Alternation and Clausal Complements 147
4.4.2. The Nature of Locative and Adverb Categories 157
4.4.3. The Selectiveness of L 160
4.4.4. Summary 163
4.5. Movement and the Timing of the Derivation 163
4.5.1. Activity and the Lack of Optionality 169
4.6. Investigating L and Case: Clues from Otjiherero 174

5. Case Morphology in Zulu and Beyond 178
5.1. Case Classification 179
5.2. Structural Licensing: Recap 184
5.3. Zulu Nominal Prefixes and Licensing 185
5.3.1. Classification of Oblique Prefixes 186
5.3.2. Structural Restrictions on Obliques 190
5.3.3. Case Morphology in Zulu 195
5.4. The Augment and the Role of Case Morphology in Zulu 197

5.5. Case and Agreement Interactions 204
5.5.1. On Agreeableness 204
5.5.2. Timing of Agreement and Case 206
5.5.3. The Status of Augment-permitting Prefixes 209
5.5.4. Case Concord? 212
5.6. Examining the Augment inside DP 217
5.6.1. Augmentless nominals at the NP level 217
5.6.2. DP-level processes 220
5.7. Conclusion 228

6. Optional Agreement and Other Consequences 229
6.1. Subject Agreement: Rule and Exceptions 231
6.1.1. Complex NP Subjects 232
6.1.2. Raised Subjects 234
6.1.3. Tallying the Score 242
6.2. Understanding Optional Agreement 242
6.2.1. Clausal Agreement 243
6.2.2. Complex NP Subjects 245
6.2.3. Raised Subjects 250
6.3. EPP Insights 256
6.3.1. Exotic Cases of Raising: English and Greek 259
6.4. Conclusion 262

7. Variation in the Syntactic Landscape 264
7.1. Accounting for Zulu 264
7.2. Morals for Syntactic Theory 269
7.2.1. Zulu and the Organization of the Grammar 269
7.2.2. Some Final Thoughts: Zulu and the Nature of Syntactic Variation 274

Bibliography 279
Index 291